

Technical Memorandum

Vulnerability Assessment and Inundation Mapping

Monroe County Roadway Vulnerability Analysis and Capital Plan
Monroe County, Florida

December 29, 2020

Prepared for Monroe County

Purpose of Memo

This memo provides a summary of the applicability and operation of the GIS model, criticality analysis methodology, the inputs it requires and the outputs it generates, and a vulnerability flood score for the County roadways. Furthermore, this tech memo will describe the process and present the results of the projected water level analysis and development of inundation mapping.

Project Intent and Description

As part of the Monroe County (County) Roadway Vulnerability Analysis and Capital project, the roadways maintained by the County will be evaluated to develop a long-term roads adaptation plan based on design criteria, Sea Level Rise (SLR) projections, adaptation methodology, policy/financing evaluation, and public/stakeholder outreach. The primary objective of the project is to analyze the impacts of current and projected levels of SLR on all County maintained roads and to develop an implementation plan and timeline to adapt roads for SLR. The results will be used to determine new policy considerations and design criteria for what acceptable levels of service should be.

Design Approach

Projected Water Level Modeling

The Mean Sea Level (MSL) and Mean Higher High Water (MHHW) was reviewed at the 3 NOAA Gauges and recommended to proceed with the use of the Naples Gauge for consistency with the rest of the data as it also provides a more conservative approach considering the difference between all three gauges. It yielded a MSL of -0.62' and MHHW 0.60' (NAVD88). These existing water levels have been used in combination with SLR Projections and King Tide Predictions to evaluate the different projected water level scenarios in relation to the existing road surface elevations. This evaluation has yielded where the "Problem" of flooding is and/or will occur and the rate that it is anticipated to continue based on the corresponding scenarios. A flood assessment has been conducted for the following time periods 2025, 2030, 2035, 2040, 2045, 2060, and 2100 as well as for the low and high boundary consisting of the IPCC Median and the NOAA 2017 Intermediate-high.

In accordance with the SLR Projection Technical Memorandum, the recommended SLR projections for Monroe County, FL are presented in Table 1.

Vulnerability Assessment and Inundation Mapping

In accordance with the King Tide Prediction Technical Memorandum, the recommended SLR projections with added King Tides and normal wind setup for Monroe County, FL are presented in Table 2.

The Unified Sea Level Rise Projection SE Florida (Guidance Report) developed for the SE FL Regional Climate Change Compact 2019 Projections, indicates that for a project that has a short term planning horizon (2070) and is not considered as a small risk project whose failure would result in limited consequences to others, is to use the NOAA 2017 Intermediate-High SLR projection. The Guidance report also states that the “IPCC median curve represents the most likely average sea level before 2070, but is not representative of realistic interannual and interdecadal variations that will occur with SLR.”

Inundation Mapping

Modeling comparing the projected water elevations against the existing roadway surface elevations was conducted for the NOAA 2017 Intermediate-High SLR projections and corresponding King Tide Predictions for 2025, 2030, 2035, 2040, 2045, 2060, and 2100, respectively. The publicly available Lidar from the South Florida Water Management District that captures the limits beyond the roadway public right-of-way was also included in the inundation mapping to depict low lying areas adjacent to the roadway.

The color legend in Figure 1 was included to depict the elevation difference between the projected water level and the existing ground elevation. The negative value represents a situation where the projected water level is higher than the existing ground elevation. The positive 6 inches depicts the areas in which the projected water table is just below the ground surface, representing an area that may potentially become vulnerable to flooding in the future. Anything greater than a water depth of 3 feet is being depicted in red color. The maximum projected water elevation depth varies depending on water projection selected, location, and analysis year. For the year 2100, the flooding water depths are expected to be greater than 10 feet.

A GIS data base for the inundation plans has been created, it enables the selection of a specific area, time period, and projected water level. Providing a digital data base platform facilitates navigation through the County Maintained roads as well as eliminates the need physically print and file plans.

A map scale of 1"=200' is being used for a total number of 1,935 map sheets that includes all County maintained roadways. Maps will be available on a 24" x 26" paper size for which a Plan Sheet Layout for the Lower, Middle, and Upper Keys will be available. Upon selection of a specific map on the Plan Sheet Layout the corresponding MAP PDF file will be opened for use.

A PDF database of all the 1,935 maps will be provided to the County. Figure 2 Shows the Upper Keys Inundation Map Series.

Vulnerability and Criticality Assessments

Developed a GIS-based Vulnerability Assessment model to identify and prioritize the County's roadways at risk for adverse impacts due to climate change. The model was developed in the Spatial Modelbuilder environment of Desktop ArcGIS 10.6.1 using the raster overlay tools in the Spatial Analyst extension. Although Vulnerability Analysis was ran and is available for all analysis years, the design year or specific planning horizon of 2045 was selected and output list included as an attachment in this technical memorandum.

The Vulnerability assessment consisted on a 2-tier process that first evaluated the vulnerability or at-risk of the roadway segments and then using the GIS model evaluated the criticality of the roadways affected based on a variety of engineering, environmental, cultural and emergency response factors and assigned a Vulnerability score to each segment to be used in the criticality and prioritization phase of the project. The first steps evaluated the vulnerability or at-risk of the roadway segments and then using a GIS model evaluated the vulnerability of the roadways based on 5 assessment factors. Each factor was assigned a weight in the GIS model that could be adjusted to reflect their relative importance as determined following coordination with the County. The output from this model is the Vulnerability Score for each roadway, to be used as one of the 9 factors in the Criticality Assessment. The higher vulnerability score corresponds to a greater vulnerability of a specific roadway segment. The vulnerability analysis evaluates those elements that directly affect the structural integrity of the roadway.

The Vulnerability Assessment – Used GIS to create a model that would evaluate each of the factors listed on the Vulnerability tab of the XLSX spreadsheet. Every road segment was rated on a scale from 1 – 5 according to those criteria, where 5 = most vulnerable to SLR and 1 = least vulnerable. Those road segments were then subjected to the Criticality Assessment and Prioritization exercise, which are detailed in the Prioritization Technical Memorandum. Considering that the weighting is subjective, it was an option to rate all the factors equally or treat some factors as more influential than others. A “baseline” analysis in which all factors are treated equally was developed. The adjustment of the weights enables to a better and more accurate distribution. A detailed description of this process is described hereafter.

VULNERABILITY ASSESSMENT

The Vulnerability Assessment determined the extent to which each asset was at risk from new conditions arising from climate change. The following steps occurred during the Vulnerability Assessment:

1. The list of vulnerability factors may differ based on the geographic location of the community. For the coastal area of the MCRVS project the following vulnerability factors were identified:
 - a. Roadway Groundwater Clearance
 - b. Roadway Surface Inundation Depth
 - c. Roadway Inundation Due to Storm Surge

Vulnerability Assessment and Inundation Mapping

- d. Roadway Surface Wave Impact Potential
 - e. Roadway Existing Pavement Condition
2. Determine Future Year Conditions – Hydrological modeling or other appropriate tools were used to forecast the physical conditions that would be extant for each Future Year (FY) Scenario. For the MCRVS project, these factors included:
- a. Projected Sea Level Rise- The elevation of the future sea level stand with respect to an established vertical datum (e.g., NAVD 1988) was determined for each FY Scenario. For the MCRVS, four different SLR projections were prepared based on different assumptions:
 - i. IPCC Median SLR, Without King Tide
 - ii. NOAA 2017 Intermediate-High SLR, Without King Tide
 - iii. IPCC Median SLR, With King Tide
 - iv. NOAA 2017 Intermediate-High SLR, With King Tide
 - b. Projected Storm Surge Elevations – The elevation of flooding associated with tropical cyclones (e.g., hurricanes) from NOAA SLOSH model data was obtained. The flood elevation was provided for each storm Category 1 – 5. For MCRVS the storm surge elevation was not adjusted to account for future SLR, but was based on the existing sea level stand. Consequently, this factor was constant for all scenario Years.
 - c. Projected Wave Impact – In coastal areas, wave action driven by onshore winds can severely damage buildings and infrastructure. For a given storm surge scenario, parts of the landscape with direct exposure to wind-driven waves will be more severely impacted than areas that are sheltered by intervening buildings or vegetation. The Wave Impact Score for the landscape can be classified on a scale of 1 (Very Low Impact) to 5 (Very High Impact). For the MCRVS project the Wave Impact Score was determined based on exposure to oceanic wave action under the current sea level stand and was not adjusted for SLR. Like the Storm Surge factor, this factor was constant for all scenario Years.
3. Rank Landscape Vulnerability for Each Factor - Using GIS, the study area landscape was ranked from a score of 1 (Very Low Vulnerability) to 5 (Very High Vulnerability) for each of the Vulnerability Factors. In summary:
- a. Roadway Groundwater Clearance – GIS was used to calculate the difference between the base of roadways and the future groundwater elevation. For MCRVS the future groundwater elevation was assumed to be equivalent to the projected SLR elevation given the small size and geological permeability of the islands in the Florida Keys. The groundwater clearance was classified into five classes using a quintile classifier to rate the vulnerability of roads from Very Low (1) to Very High (5).

- b. Roadway Surface Inundation Depth –GIS was used to calculate the difference between the LIDAR ground surface elevation along the roadways and the future sea level rise elevation. Areas with a positive difference were above the average sea level surface and areas with a negative difference were below the projected sea level elevation. The surface inundation was classified into five classes using a quintile classifier to rate the vulnerability of roads from Very Low (1) to Very High (5).
- c. Roadway Inundation Due to Storm Surge - Using GIS, the entire landscape surface was classified according to its forecast storm surge elevation as follows, then the roadway surface was extracted:
 - i. Class 5 –The LIDAR land surface was used to identify the land area at or below the elevation of the Category 1 flooding elevation. This area will be the most frequently affected by tropical cyclones, so it was assigned the highest vulnerability score (Class 5, Very High Vulnerability).
 - ii. Class 4 – Land area above the Category 1 flooding elevation and at or below the flood elevation for Category 2 storms was assigned to this class.
 - iii. Class 3 – The land area between the Category 2 and Category 3 flood elevations was assigned to Class 3.
 - iv. Class 2 – The land area between the Category 3 and Category 4 flood elevations was assigned to Class 2.
 - v. Class 1 – The land area above the most landward extent of the Category 4 flood elevation included both the area potentially inundated by Category 5 storms and also areas that are not inundated by any storm. These areas are the least often affected by storm surge, so they were rated as Class 1, Very Low Vulnerability.
- d. Roadway Surface Wave Impact Potential – The Wave Impact Score layer was overlaid over the LIDAR land surface in GIS, then extracted to the roadway limits. Roadways were classified on their susceptibility to wave impacts from Class 1 (Very Low Vulnerability) to Class 5 (Very High Vulnerability).
- e. Roadway Existing Pavement Condition – A Pavement Condition Inventory (PCI) was conducted on all MCRVS roadways in 2019. The PCI score was broken into five classes based on industry-accepted values for Very Good Condition to Very Poor Condition. Roadways in Very Good condition were presumed to be less vulnerable to degradation by SLR related impacts and were assigned to Class 1 (Very Low Vulnerability), while roadways with Very Poor condition in 2019 were presumed to be most vulnerable to future SLR impacts and were assigned to Class 5 (Very High Vulnerability).

4. Calculate Combined Vulnerability Rank – The ArcGIS Weighted Overlay tool computed the Vulnerability Rank for each raster cell on the roadway surface based on the values of the various Vulnerability Factors.
 - a. Vulnerability Rank Calculation - The Vulnerability Rank was the product of each individual Vulnerability Factor rank (on a scale of 1 to 5) multiplied by its Factor Weight. Figure 3 shows the Spatial Modelbuilder model used to calculate the Vulnerability Rank for each Year for Scenario B. A similar model was configured for all other SLR Scenarios.

Calculation of combined Vulnerability Score using the Weighted Overlay tool in ArcGIS Spatial Modelbuilder.

- b. Weighted Overlay vs. Weighted Sum Tool - The output of the Weighted Overlay tool was a discrete (i.e., integer value) raster ranging in values from 1 to 5. Alternatively, the ArcGIS Weighted Sum tool could be used in place of the Weighted Overlay. Entering the weights for each Vulnerability Factor was more tedious using the Weighted Sum tool, but it produced continuous (i.e., floating point) rasters, which may be advantageous for discriminating between areas that have relatively small differences in the final output Vulnerability Score that would be lost by the rounding to the nearest integer value.
 - c. Weight Adjustments – The Vulnerability Assessment model was initially run with equivalent weight given to each Vulnerability Factor (baseline analysis) and the resulting Vulnerability Rank for each road segment was compared against areas of observed King Tide flooding. Weights were adjusted until the Vulnerability Rank more closely conformed to the known at-risk roadways in the County.

The baseline analysis was designated as the “First Run” (V00) of the Criticality Analysis, with all factors having an equal weight of 20%. Analysis of this first run, made it evident that giving equal weight to all the factors was not an accurate representation of the true vulnerability of some roadway segments. Second (V01) and third (V02) runs were then conducted, with a different weight distribution for each of the factors, in each run, as can be seen in Table 3.

		(Baseline - First Run)	(Second Run)	(Third Run)
		(V00 %)	(V01 %)	(V02 %)
1	Roadway Groundwater Clearance factoring increasing water table due to SLR.	20%	20%	25%	25%	30%
2	Roadway Surface Inundation Depth (SLR Only)	20%	50%	60%	60%	60%
3	Roadway Inundation Due to Storm Surge	20%	20%	5%	5%	5%
4	Roadway Surface Wave Impact Potential	20%	5%	5%	5%	0%
5	Roadway Existing Pavement Condition	20%	5%	5%	5%	5%
		100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

Run V01 placed emphasis on inundation factors, including storm surge for the weight distribution among the vulnerability factors, while run V02 weight distribution was based on emphasis on SLR factors. Ultimately it was decided that V02 was the best weight distribution for the Vulnerability Analysis and Vulnerability Score. Table 4 outlines the Modeling results comparisons for all three model runs including the number of most vulnerable segments, miles of roadway, and number of residential units.

Once all the assessment factors for all roadway segments had been rated, the Vulnerability Score was produced based on the weighted average of all. The recommended weighting of the vulnerability factors is shown in Figure 4.

Conclusions

Ranking among the highest areas in the country for impacts of tidal flooding, Monroe County is among the most vulnerable communities in the nation to rising sea levels, with a 120-mile archipelago of islands, most of which are at or near sea level. The County is well aware that being a coastal community exposes the population to the long-term sea level rise (SLR) risks including public infrastructure and natural habitats within these highly vulnerable zones. They understand that actively protecting infrastructure to confirm continuity of public services will lead to a competitive advantage across economic, built, and natural environments as climate change makes a progressively greater impact on the region.

There are approximately 311 miles of County maintained roadways spread throughout over 1,200 locations. The roadway segments were sometimes even further broken into smaller segments defining specific blocks or limits divided by a bridge or a natural area. Therefore, there were a total of 2,383 roadway segments that were evaluated. Modeling was developed in the Spatial Modelbuilder environment of Desktop ArcGIS 10.6.1 using the raster overlay tools in the Spatial Analyst extension. The Vulnerability assessment consisted on a 2-tier process that first evaluated the vulnerability or at-risk of the roadway segments and then using the GIS model evaluated the criticality of the roadways affected based on a variety of engineering, environmental, cultural and emergency response factors.

The vulnerability study output assigned a Vulnerability Score to each roadway segment that becomes a factor in the Criticality Analysis. The Vulnerability Scoring for the year 2045 revealed that there are highly vulnerable roadway segments all throughout the County. Refer to attached vulnerability score ranking list depicting the vulnerability analysis results. It is important to note that the vulnerability analysis provides specific distinction on which roadways are more exposed to evaluation factors yielding a list based on how the structural integrity of the roadway segments are compromised. The vulnerability analysis has enabled the identification of the most vulnerable areas and when can we expect for them to reach a critical vulnerable state.

The criticality analysis will not change or affect the results of the vulnerability analysis. The vulnerability scores become a factor of the criticality analysis and the results of the criticality analysis becomes a tool that the County can use in the prioritization exercise that is to identify the most critical 25% of the roadway segments that are to be further evaluated.

Additionally, modeling was conducted that compared the projected water elevations against the existing roadway surface elevations for the NOAA 2017 Intermediate-High SLR projections and corresponding King Tide Predictions for 2025, 2030, 2035, 2040, 2045, 2060, and 2100, respectively. A digital map sheet layout for the Lower, Middle, and Upper Keys enables the selection of a sheet on a particular area that prompts an inundation map PDF. Providing a digital data base platform facilitates navigation through the County Maintained roads as well as eliminates the need to physically print and file maps.
